Automated DNA Sequencing

The diagram illustrates the automated DNA sequencing process. It is divided into three main stages: 'Sample Library', 'Sequencing', and 'Data Analysis'. The 'Sample Library' stage shows DNA fragments being prepared. The 'Sequencing' stage shows the fragments being sequenced on a flow cell. The 'Data Analysis' stage shows the resulting sequencing data being processed. The diagram includes various icons representing different steps and components of the process.

Maxam-Gilbert Sequencing

The diagram illustrates the Maxam-Gilbert sequencing process. It shows a DNA strand being labeled at the end (End labeling). The DNA is then treated with a base (Base modified and terminated) and a chemical (Phosphodiester bond cleavage). The resulting fragments are separated and analyzed. The diagram includes various icons representing different steps and components of the process.
